The Final Covers of Far Cry 2 - Press Release.Q: React.js initComponent do not execute callback I am using react-starter-kit to use react.js in ASP.NET Core. When use initComponent function of react component,callback must be called.But it not call it. I used Reactify.js before and my code work well.

React.Component.prototype.constructor = function() { this._toggle = React.addons.EventHandler.create(this._onToggle);
React.Component.prototype.constructor.apply(this, arguments); };
React.Component.prototype._onToggle = function() { alert("test"); setSomeData(this); } function func() { React.renderComponent( , document.getElementById("div") ); } In the above code, _onToggle execute in all page.But _toggle execute only in called function. A: The event handler should exist when the component is rendered. If you want to delay that, you can use setTimeout. this._toggle = React.addons.EventHandler.create(this._onToggle); setTimeout(function() { React.renderComponent( , document.getElementById("div") ); }, 0); Or you can use useRef hook for the element that will hold the onToggle event. ref._toggle = React.addons.EventHandler.create(this._onToggle)}>; and then call it from your _onToggle handler. setTimeout(() => { React.renderComponent(, document.getElementById("div")); }, 0); News SEATTLE
