In the wireless communication market, most electronic products are designed to have detachable housings or modifiable housings, in order to adapt to a user's individual preference. As a result, a user can obtain a housing having some of advantages, while sacrificing some other advantages. Historical agency A historical agency is a web-based subscription service that requires you to pay a small subscription fee (of approximately US$10 per year) in order to be able to view all the pictures you have stored on their system. All content, regardless of type, is available for download. In the late 1990s the term "historical agency" was used as an umbrella term to cover any service that offered access to "historical and scientific images". Later the term was redefined by the International Image Interoperability Association (IIIA) as being "a digital, image-based information management, preservation and delivery service.". Many of these historical agencies were available in the 1990s through a pay-per-view model. They often charged a subscription fee of several dollars per image (or possibly the cost of the film), and the fee was then paid for by the publisher upon delivery
